Biodata

Isabelle Buchstaller is Professor of English Linguistics at the University of Duisburg-Essen, Germany, where she heads the Sociolinguistic Lab. Her research interests include spatial patterns in linguistic heterogeneity, where she combines variationist sociolinguistic and linguistic landscape perspectives. She has published widely in this area, and her recent work appeared in the Journal of Linguistic Landscapes and the Journal of Linguistics Geography. Her other research interest is language variation and change, and she has recently been focused on exploring patterns of change within the individual speaker across the lifespan. Her research in this area has appeared in the journal Language Variation and Change, the Journal of Sociolinguistics and Language in Society. She is a co-editor of the series Routledge Studies in Language Change (with Suzanne Wagner) and she sits on the editorial board of the Journal of Language and Aging Research, the Journal of Linguistic Geography and Glossa – Contact.
